*Venue: TBC
Auckland or Matakana Region*

We are living in an age where it is challenging to hold a sense of what is sacred, and what is fundamentally essential in our lives in regards our inner well-being and experience of 'place and purpose; of connection and belonging.' A Way to Live Spirit programmes, provide a safe, intimate environment in which to explore and gain a deeper experience of our self, and to build a contemporary foundation in Spirit.

Self in Creation is offered as a weekend, non-residential format to provide participants with an introductory level experience.

The work follows an inquiry-process, journeying into the interior realms of self, exploring who we are as a soul and in spirit, and the purpose of incarnate life; it follows the emergent themes existent within the group, utilizing creative-media to intuitively and safely, explore and reflect upon these matters as they relate to us personally and collectively: emotionally, psychologically, and spiritually. It is an embodied and integrative process, opening us to the potency and intent of the soul. Enlisting creativity enables us to access the interior realms of self, intuitively and spontaneously bringing to the surface the wisdom and knowing, the memories and constructions that inform and shape us as women seeking to live a conscious, creatively productive life. In this facilitated process, principles in transpersonal and esoteric philosophies are examined when appropriate. Meditation and contemplative processes provide a sacred holding of the groups journeying. The work is experientially based.

Methodologies: group-centred process, teaching in transpersonal, metaphysical principles, and the ancient wisdoms (esoteric philosophies), meditation, and creative mediums as expressive & contemplative tools.

Participants will:

- be involved in an intimate, and interactive group process
- develop intuition, sensory perception, creative-imagining and creative expression
- directly experience an active spiritual field
- grow understanding and knowledge base of embodied, spiritual practice, promoting integration

Limited to 9 participants
